

LOCAL.—A North East storm set in last night, and it continued to rain heavily all night, and this morning; a great quantity of water has fallen, and there will be, probably, a rise in all the streams.—In all the adjacent country there is now almost an entire absence of all fencing or enclosures around the farms, and many of the houses are deserted.—The wife of Mr. Elijah Horseman, met with a serious accident yesterday afternoon, by falling and breaking her arm; she was getting some milk from a wagon, in front of her residence on Royal street, when the horse started, and Mrs. H., in attempting to step back, fell.—There are at present confined in the county jail two females, one white and one negro two boys, two white men, and one negro man, for larceny and other civil offences, and a Federal soldier confined by military order.—The Dog Laws are to be enforced—and all dogs found in the Market square are to be destroyed, and persons taking dogs there to be fined five dollars; the dog tax is to be paid on the 1st of August.—All the Alexandria prisoners taken in the recent battles before Richmond, have been sent from Governor's Island to Fort Warren, except Hector B. Eaches, John Horseman and Thomas Cross, who were left on Governor's Island.—The health of the prisoners is good.

The name of Wm. Gregory, was included in the indictments found by the Grand Jury, at its recent term, upon the presumption that he was a director of the Alexandria Water Company, which is a mistake.

At the first interview of representatives from the border slave States with the President, the latter stated substantially that, in his judgment, the Confederates held out in hope of ultimate co-operation from the border States, and that had they entered upon a system of emancipation as suggested by him at the beginning of the session, the heart of the rebellion would be broken. To this ex-Gov. Thomas responded, that the position assumed by the President put the border slave States in an injurious position before the country and the world, and inasmuch as no appropriation had been made by Congress to carry out the policy of the Executive, it was fit that one should be urged upon Congress, and if made, the people would have something to rely upon in any action they might propose to take. The President replied that unless something in the nature of a permanent appropriation was made, then "the bottom would be out of the tub."

LIBERTY HALL.—Still another overflowing house greeted the great Canterbury company last night, and the indications are that equal success will, for a long time, attend the efforts of the enterprising managers, as it has been a long time since we have enjoyed a treat of this kind. To-night some entirely new features will be introduced in the programme. See advertisement.

Colonel Madison Miller, of Missouri, and Major Stone, of Iowa, Union prisoners captured at Shiloh, have returned to Washington from Petersburg, Va. They came to Washington on parole some weeks ago, by consent of the Confederate Government, to negotiate a general exchange of prisoners. They failed, and went back to the Confederates to give themselves up. General Dix was subsequently directed to accept the Confederate proposition, which only required that General Buckner should be included by the U. S. Government in its list of prisoners to be surrendered.—When this news reached Petersburg, Colonel Miller and Major Stone, at the instance of the Confederate Secretary of War, returned to Washington to facilitate a matter so desirable to suffering prisoners on both sides.—Miller says there are twenty thousand Union prisoners in the South, and that their food is deficient and their sufferings great. He says further that the Confederates are jubilant over their late fight; that conscription is rigidly enforced, and their army at Richmond very large, though none of Beauregard's army is there.
